

DEVI GARH

Nestled in the Aravali hills, the 18th century Devi Garh Fort Palace in the village of Delwara, forms one of the three main passes into the valley of Udaipur. Due to its strategic importance, the principality of Delwara was awarded to Sajja Singh, who hailed from Gujarat, for displaying his bravery and loyalty to Maharana Pratap of Mewar against the Mughal Emperor Akbar in the battle of Haldighati (1576). Since this was a time of continuous wars against the Mughal invaders, the construction of the Fort Palace was only started in the 1760's by Raghudev Singh II. Subsequent rulers made many additions to the building, which was abandoned in the 1960's after the principality was merged into the state of Rajasthan.

Devi Garh, is now ready for visitors after years of restoration and rebuilding. The Fort Palace was conceived as a place where the past meets the future. This all suite luxury hotel comprising of 23 suites and 7 tents takes, on the look of modern India, with an emphasis on design and detail, using local marbles and semi-precious stones. The contemporary design showcased within this spectacular heritage property, complemented by personalised and intimate services, creates a new image of India for the 21st century.
